According to the statements of citizens a different sections of the Southside, the night this year has been the worst known or a great many years. The rains that fell ig the late summer and early fall were sufficient to save the crops, but not suffient to give the carth a good wetting. The ils in many places are very low or diving up, and I learn that water has to be ransported to some of the stations on the Allantic, Mississippi and Ohio railroad west of us to supply the tanks.

THE DESPERATE ENCOUNTER BETWEEN MR. TOM SHORT AND A WILDCAT. [Eureka (Nevadz) Lender.]

Mr. Tom Short, a well-known cattle-man has furnished fine beeves to Eureka butch ers, the forepart of last week had an encounter with a large wildcat which came TON-GRANGE PAIR AND TOURNAMENT-EF. Dear resulting fatally to Tom. It appears TON-GRANDER GREAT DROUGHT-PAINFUL that Mr. Short bad set out early in the of strayed steers, and was alone, with the exception of his two dogs. He was letsurely riding along a rough mountainroad, his dogs a little in advance, and as they came to an abrupt turn in the trail the dogs were lost to sight. In a few minutes Tom beard them velping and barking, and at once knew they had attacked some wild animal. Putting spur to his horse he was only a few seconds in turning the break in the path and coming to the scene of action. The two dogs had attacked a wildcat, one of the largest of its species, and were getting terribly worsted. Mr. Short saw how the fight was going, and not caring to lose his valued dogs he sprang from his horse, drew his revolver, and rushed to the aid of his canines. He had not much more than left the saddle, and was watching for a chance to shoot without hitting the dogs, when the wildcat saw him, settled on his haunches, and then made a spring, striking Tom in the breast, knocking the pistol out of his hand, and carrying him to the ground. This would undoubtedly have been the last of Mr. Short had not fortune favored him. Just before the attack he had also drawn a knife, and while losing his revolver he clung to this, and as the cat bore him to the ground he made a desperate thrust, and most fortunately the blade touched a vital spot, and the brute rolled over dead. Tom lay in an exhausted and almost senseless condition, but only for a short time, and as a couple of men happened along, and seeing a horse without a rider, immediately sought the cause, found Mr. Short, and conveyed him to a ranch and dispatched a messenger to Elko for a doctor. Mr. Short was terribly cut up about the face, neck, and arms, and has been able to be about but little. We are a course of special sermons on the Propleased to say, however, that no permanent ets, to be continued through the winter. injury will be sustained. The wildcat was one of the largest and most ferocious of its kind, weighing nearly two bundred pounds.

A WILDCAT WHIPS Two Dogs .- [Palatka (Fla.) The Parts Bourse Demoralized. LONDON, November 6 .- The Times's financial article says: "The Paris Bourse is in a demoralized condition, and many speculative brokers have failed to meet their engagements. The uneasy feeling centres in two securities-viz., shares of the Banque European and of the Crédit-Mobilier. It is said that M. Phillipart, who is largely interested in the latter, has sustained heavy losses in private and other speculations."
